WELL BALANCED TREES.

PRACTICAL AND MODERN METHOD.

STAKING OF TREES A NECESSITY.

The illustration below shows the modern nursery method of growing straight young trees, by tying each to a stake. This method, combined with the very careful and constant attention they receive during the whole period of growth, enables us to supply trees that open up to our customers' entire satisfaction. No crooked or unshapely trees are grown, consequently none are supplied.

To ultimately have a grove of citrus trees which are symmetrical in growth, evenly balanced, shapely and capable of carrying the crop to maturity, it is not only an advantage to plant well-grown trees with a good conformation, but an absolute necessity. Staking a plant or trees is only a light job but nevertheless intricate and this again calls for special attention and must be carried out in a skilful manner, more particularly when thousands of trees are to receive the same care and treatment.

It is certainly progress on straight lines when every individual tree is staked.

The result of staking all trees is clearly shown here. Straight, sturdy trees are the result of strict attention to every detail.

The photo shows portion of 65,000 Citrus ready for sale.

For 20 years and more this method has not only been adopted by us but has been carried out in a practical and efficient manner, with the result that visitors to our Nursery this season will find over 65,000 staked trees, that would, with their other prominent features, be certain to satisfy even the most critical buyer. We claim to be the largest growers of staked citrus trees in Queensland, if not in the whole of Australia.
